Are Your Pet Peeves Justified?

Do your pet peeves stand up to rational scrutiny, or are they manifestations of your personality quirks? Most people have a collection of pet peeves, some of which seem peculiar to others.

Peeve means irritating and usually we are irritated by situations and other people's annoying habits or actions. Pet peeves are annoyances that we generalize and are often expressed by "I hate _____".

How about?

- Drivers who don't use turn signals
- Grocery carts with one bad wheel
- Tailgaters
- People who say "yes, but..."
- People who say they are on a fixed income

Why do we have pet peeves? Can we justify them? Join fellow Institute members in discussing and attempting to rationalize various pet peeves. Bring your own list or listen to others. We will attempt to make sense out of the sometimes nonsensical.

Free to members. Every Tuesday, 9-10 AM, June 8 through September 28.

What Do We Mean By "Love"?

This spring the Great Ideas seminar group learned what the great thinkers of Western civilization had to say about Change, Freedom, God, and Good & Evil by watching DVD's of Dr. Mortimer Adler's 30 minute lectures on the topics, and then discussing the lecture.

This summer the Institute will present a series of four 30 minute Adler lectures on Love, with plenty of discussion time after the lecture. Presented monthly on the fourth Wednesday beginning June 23rd from 2-3:30 PM, the topics include:

- The Nature and Kinds of Love
- Love as Friendship
- Erotic Love
- The Morality of Love

Free to Members. Reservations: 352.357.3995 or www.lakeeustisinstitute.org.
